

I wanted to make a post but I am having a very difficult time. The internet was too slow to type. I had to shut down almost every window and restart the computer to get it to respond. In all it took a half hour later to get my computer to even work. Let me say this there is a devil and he is the enemy of God. What I want to write about is that pastors are too young to preach. I have been studying deep into the Bible for 22 years. That includes all ancient translations with intermixed studies of modern Bibles to see the folly with modern Bibles which are all corrupt. I study the King James Bible mostly but I compare the older translations diligently. I have studied a lot of the Greek, Hebrew and Aramaic the language behind the King James Bible. I have made diligent comparisons with the 1388 Wycliffe and with the Latin Vulgate from which it was taken. I have studied the ancient Spanish now I will tear this title up: The Sagragas Escripturus of what is the date 1569. I have studied the 1560 and later versions of the Geneva Bible. I have studied the Great Bible of 1541. I have compared word searches of a lesser extent to the Erasmus 1519 Latin New Testament and Latin Vulgate. I have studied the back of the Strong's Exhaustive Concordance. I am in the process of buying a Dead Sea Scrolls book and a Dead Sea Scrolls Bible. I have had limited studies of the Apocrypha of the Old Testament and limited to no studies of other Apocryphal books. I have studied hours of YouTubes concerning the Bible. There is still a lot of books I need to catch up with. Sadly, I put a lot of studies into man's false wisdom and including the "white lies" of Ellen G. White. Some of my studies even included the Jehovah's Wandering Witnesses. I have spent a lot of time in churches so that I am so tired of churches I can't stand them anymore.

I am convinced of the following. Pastors that study theology are not well equipped enough to preach without years of experience in the King James Bible and at the bare minimum the Greek Hebrew and Aramaic behind it. I have studied deep at times in the Bible but at other times I have not studied the Bible as I should. I am convinced a pastor needs at least 20-30 year's experience in the Bible before ever touching the pulpit. I am finding flaw after flaw in church theology. I am mostly studying the King James these days but I have come to the conclusion I am not prepared to preach. While most of what I write is sound doctrine I realize I have sinned and missed the mark. I am still not prepared to preach. I am just beginning to understand the Bible and its deep meaning. Right now, I am deeply studying Isaiah 29-30 and am seeing I need to read it even more. The Bible is just starting to make sense and truly God blinds our eyes from the truth not because we are stupid or ignorant but because lack of experience.

Now I want to tell you I am no saint. I fail continually to meet up to God's standards and everyone I mean everyone will learn truth whether they want to or not.

\(Isa 54:13\) And all thy children shall be taught of the LORD; and great shall be the peace of thy children.

It is not just memorizing books of the Bible, dates, nations, verses and more it is a relationship with God. That relationship starts with reading the Bible. Maybe with my failing memory I am too hard on myself but I don't think God wants me to become complacent either. I am a hypocrite but there is more. Some people, and I include myself, have the greater responsibility as Christians than others. The problem is I know I will never be taken seriously. I used to show up to Bible study with the King James and a Strong's. God help the times I showed up with an even older translation. God help me for teaching Latin or the Wycliffe. I want to say I love God and I know I do but I wonder how God feels about me who I am aiming to please.

I think a lot of the times we are setting our sites too low for God. We want the fame, the instant gratification that comes with preaching but do you know there were only three preachers mentioned in the Bible. Noah was one, King Solomon and the Apostle Paul the last. Jesus had a separate title. As for one he is the Christ, the anointed of the LORD, and the title of Rabonia spelling and Word didn't help. Where do we get the fancy titles from? I just don't think any of us are qualified and those that are need to look in the mirror as I am doing now. Maybe its too many chiefs and not enough Indians. Maybe its too many Bibles with not enough truth when we have the King James. Maybe it is far too many denominations with too many splits every time a certain pastor sees something different in his or her modern lying Bible or the Bible, they wrote themselves. Maybe there just needs to be a little love and peace. One thing I have learned in the Bible is that God wants us to love each other. Bibles aside churches aside pastors aside maybe God wants us to love each other and to do our best, and here I stand guilty, to forgive one another. I am sorry to tell you this but churches aren't about fame or money. Its about a King whose name is Jesus. We say salvation is a free thing. Nothing is free. Health care ain't free, food ain't free, HUD ain't free, welfare isn't free; I mean someone has to pay the price for freedom and that includes freedom. Maybe the JW's and SDA church should realize if it weren't for a veteran who served your church might become a place of Muslim worship. My final point is salvation isn't free either because someone had to pay that price. That provider and savior is LORD Jesus Christ. He paid the price for our sins and before you go around boasting "I'm saved!" realize there is more to the Bible than Romans 10:9 and 10:13. If God wanted us just to be saved maybe we just need salvation cards and not an entire Bible. Maybe if you are a pastor you need to realize that God is a loving God and wants us to stop our differences. You don't need hundreds of different Bibles all trying to steer you the wrong way. All the denominations are confusion and God:

\(1Co 14:33\) For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints.

Maybe man with knowledge or not, is trying to direct you the wrong way. Maybe all he cares about is your name, your number in his or her church, and the thickness of your wallet. Maybe this is the reason my computer gave me so much grief because Satan knew this was what I wanted to say. You can't throw a couple of dollars away in the tithe box and expect your eternity card to be punched. I've made one pastor and his church happy with tithe money which I am pertaining to one pastor who became addicted to my wallet. I may not give much but I don't have much and I did stop giving years ago because I realized the flaws of churches. I've heard of pastors making as much as $20,000.00 a year, but if you paid me that in a regular salary you would have some unbelievable sermons: The problem is you would hate my sermons because I don't tickle ears. I don't preach the easy way. I preach that life has consequences. I preach that there is death and there is hell. I preach what the King James Bible says by carefully reading it. I preach not to throw away your salvation the day after saying yes to Jesus. For time sakes and capacity sakes I will stop here. Just know you don't have to give to a pastor to get saved. You don't have to digest the Bible everyday to get saved. You don't have to attend a church to get saved. God knows most churches are all wrong anyhow and the pastor that speaks to you. You can have church in the privacy of your bedroom; in fact, you don't even need a Bible to get you to heaven if you are in some country that banned them. In the midst of chains and a cold prison cell God is there. In the depths of some hellish nightmare buried in sins God is there. God is there in the trenches with you and that includes the Marine behind enemy lines. God is there in sickness and in death, and ready to hear your cries. God is there when the gavel pronounces guilty. God is in your midst everywhere you go because why. Because God is love and we should be love also. And maybe that is the key to the Bible because that is what God is asking, "love." Amen...
